

Critical Watch Taps Industry Experts for Advisory Board
Close connection to marketplace continues with input from leading enterprises

April 8, 2008 – (Dallas, Texas) – Critical Watch, a leading provider of security risk management and compliance solutions, announced today the creation of an advisory board comprised of seasoned industry executives with rich experience in security, IT and compliance within world-class organizations. Because Critical Watch places significant emphasis on customer and industry-driven product development, the advisory board is seen as another important step in delivering products and services that are innovative, market-based and useful for real world practitioners. The initial members of the Advisory board are: Alliance Data Information Technology Officer, Barry Carter; Affiliated Computer Services (ACS) Chief Information Security Officer, Chris Leach; Perot Systems Chief Information Security Officer, Jim Motes.

“Our goal for the advisory board is to gain perspective on everyday situations the members face in solving real-world challenges and providing them effective security risk management and compliance solutions,” states Critical Watch President and CEO David Laizerovich.

The advisory board will meet regularly and may expand the membership over time.
