Critical Watch Named '2009 Hot Company' at Technosium Executive Alliance (TEA) Forum in San Francisco Sponsored by Network Products Guide

April 1, 2009 (Dallas, Texas) Critical Watch, the leading provider of security, risk and compliance solutions, today announced that it has been named a '2009 Hot Company,' a recognition honored by Network Products Guide, the world's leading publication on technologies and solutions published from Silicon Valley, California. Many well-known and successful organizations have been born or grown during economic uncertainties. The 2009 Hot Companies continue to be successful because the founders identified a market need and are following the 4Ps criteria by focusing on their products, people, performance and potential.

President and CEO David Laizerovich presented to a live audience at the Technosium Executive Alliance Forum in San Francisco and received feedback from attendees that included industry executives and end-user community comprising of Chief Information Officers (CIOs) and Chief Information Security Officers (CISOs). Chris Vein, City CIO and Executive Director, Department of Technology at City and County of San Francisco also presented at this forum. Chris is known for recognizing the challenges that the City and County of San Francisco face and coming up with a strategy to address the issues and hopefully build the consensus to resolve them. The Technosium forum also included current topic panels represented by leading technology vendors, CIOs and CISOs. Cisco Systems, Inc. supported the Technosium forum by presenting on strategic alliances and being part of industry panels.

"It's an honor to be recognized as a pioneer in the technology industry, and the Hot Companies award validates Critical Watch's commitment to its cutting-edge product innovation and customer satisfaction," said Laizerovich. Critical Watch intends to continue its leadership in vulnerability management and compliance solutions, launching new and innovative products and achieving greater customer satisfaction."
